When this need develops, how it develops and what a child learns regarding his power in the world is directly or indirectly taught by the parent. Yes, I am the one who taught my child to oppose me in this way! During the first two years of life, the child learns to oppose the parent. By age three, the child usually has the skill developed to such an extent that a parent can feel overwhelmed, overpowered, overrun and quite angry and determined to get this child to behave better.

Understanding Power Struggles - Positive Parenting

A power struggle is when a child refuses to do something and the parent continues to insist on the child "Do it now." The ongoing banter can become a battle of the wills as the parent says, "Yes," and the child says, "No." The longer this argument carries on, the more difficult it becomes to get the child to comply.
