The Mist in the Mirror - Wikipedia

2.5 After loving two of Susan Hill's other ghost stories- The Woman In Black and The Man in the Picture- THE MIST IN THE MIRROR was a little disappointing... though it does follow pretty much the same formula as the other two for the most part... It starts in London on a dark and stormy night. An older man with a story to tell A younger man willing to listen

The Mist in the Mirror by Susan Hill - Goodreads

The text we're using is an extract from Susan Hill's 'Mist in the Mirror'. It's a fairly 'routine' piece of atmospheric writing, the kind we expect from Mrs Woman in Black. However, it's effective for its overall structure (which we will look at in lessons) and use of language.

GCSE English Language Paper 1 revision: THE MIST IN THE MIRROR

Susan Hill's THE MIST IN THE MIRROR (1992) is an old-fashioned ghost story. Typical in construction of a Victorian era tale, the story contains a story within a story. An unnamed narrator meets Sir James Monmouth for the first time in their gentleman's club where talk is of a ghost having been seen in a wing of the house.

Having been deprived of a new Susan Hill ghost story at Christmas 2011 I turned to "Mist in the Mirror" which I had on the shelf but hadn't read before. Like The Small Hand , The Woman In Black and The Man in the Picture it's a fairly short book, at 180 pages, almost more of a long short story than a (modern length) novel, but I think that suits the genre.

The whole time I was reading Susan Hill's novel The Mist in the Mirror I wanted to go back and read the whole thing again. At the end of every paragraph — at the end of every sentence — I was thinking that I needed to go right back to the start, to let every word sit on my tongue, to pick apart every phrase to see how it worked.
